LOCATION SUMMARY

LAKEWOOD, WA is a vibrant and diverse city, proudly serving as the primary gateway to Joint Base Lewis-McChord (JBLM), the largest joint military base on the West Coast, while simultaneously forging a unique identity as the "International District of Pierce County." This strategic position has cultivated a dynamic economic landscape, anchored by one of Washington State's largest Industrial Parks and a rich global commerce sector that draws residents and visitors alike to its unique array of international shops and restaurants. Beyond its commercial strength, Lakewood offers abundant natural recreation, often dubbed a lakeside retreat, boasting five major lakes including Steilacoom and American Lake, four scenic golf courses, and the expansive Fort Steilacoom Park, one of the region's premier outdoor destinations for sports, history, and leisure. Lakewood successfully blends its profound military heritage, strong economic base, and wealth of natural amenities to create a compelling and appealing destination in the Puget Sound region.
