Seattle's New Billion Dollar Waterfront

The Seattle Waterfront Project is a transformative, multi-billion-dollar redevelopment initiative that is reimagining the city's central waterfront along Elliott Bay. Spearheaded by the City of Seattle in partnership with non-profit Friends of Waterfront Seattle and other public and private stakeholders, the project reconnects downtown Seattle to its shoreline including the removal of the Alaskan Way Viaduct.

At the heart of the plan is the creation of 20-acre linear park and public promenade that stretches from Pioneer Square to Belltown. Key features include pedestrian-friendly streetscapes, new green spaces, improved multimodal transportation infrastructure, and iconic public amenities such as the re-built Elliott Way, the new Overlook Walk, a waterfront aquarium expansion, and Pier 62 as an event and gathering space.

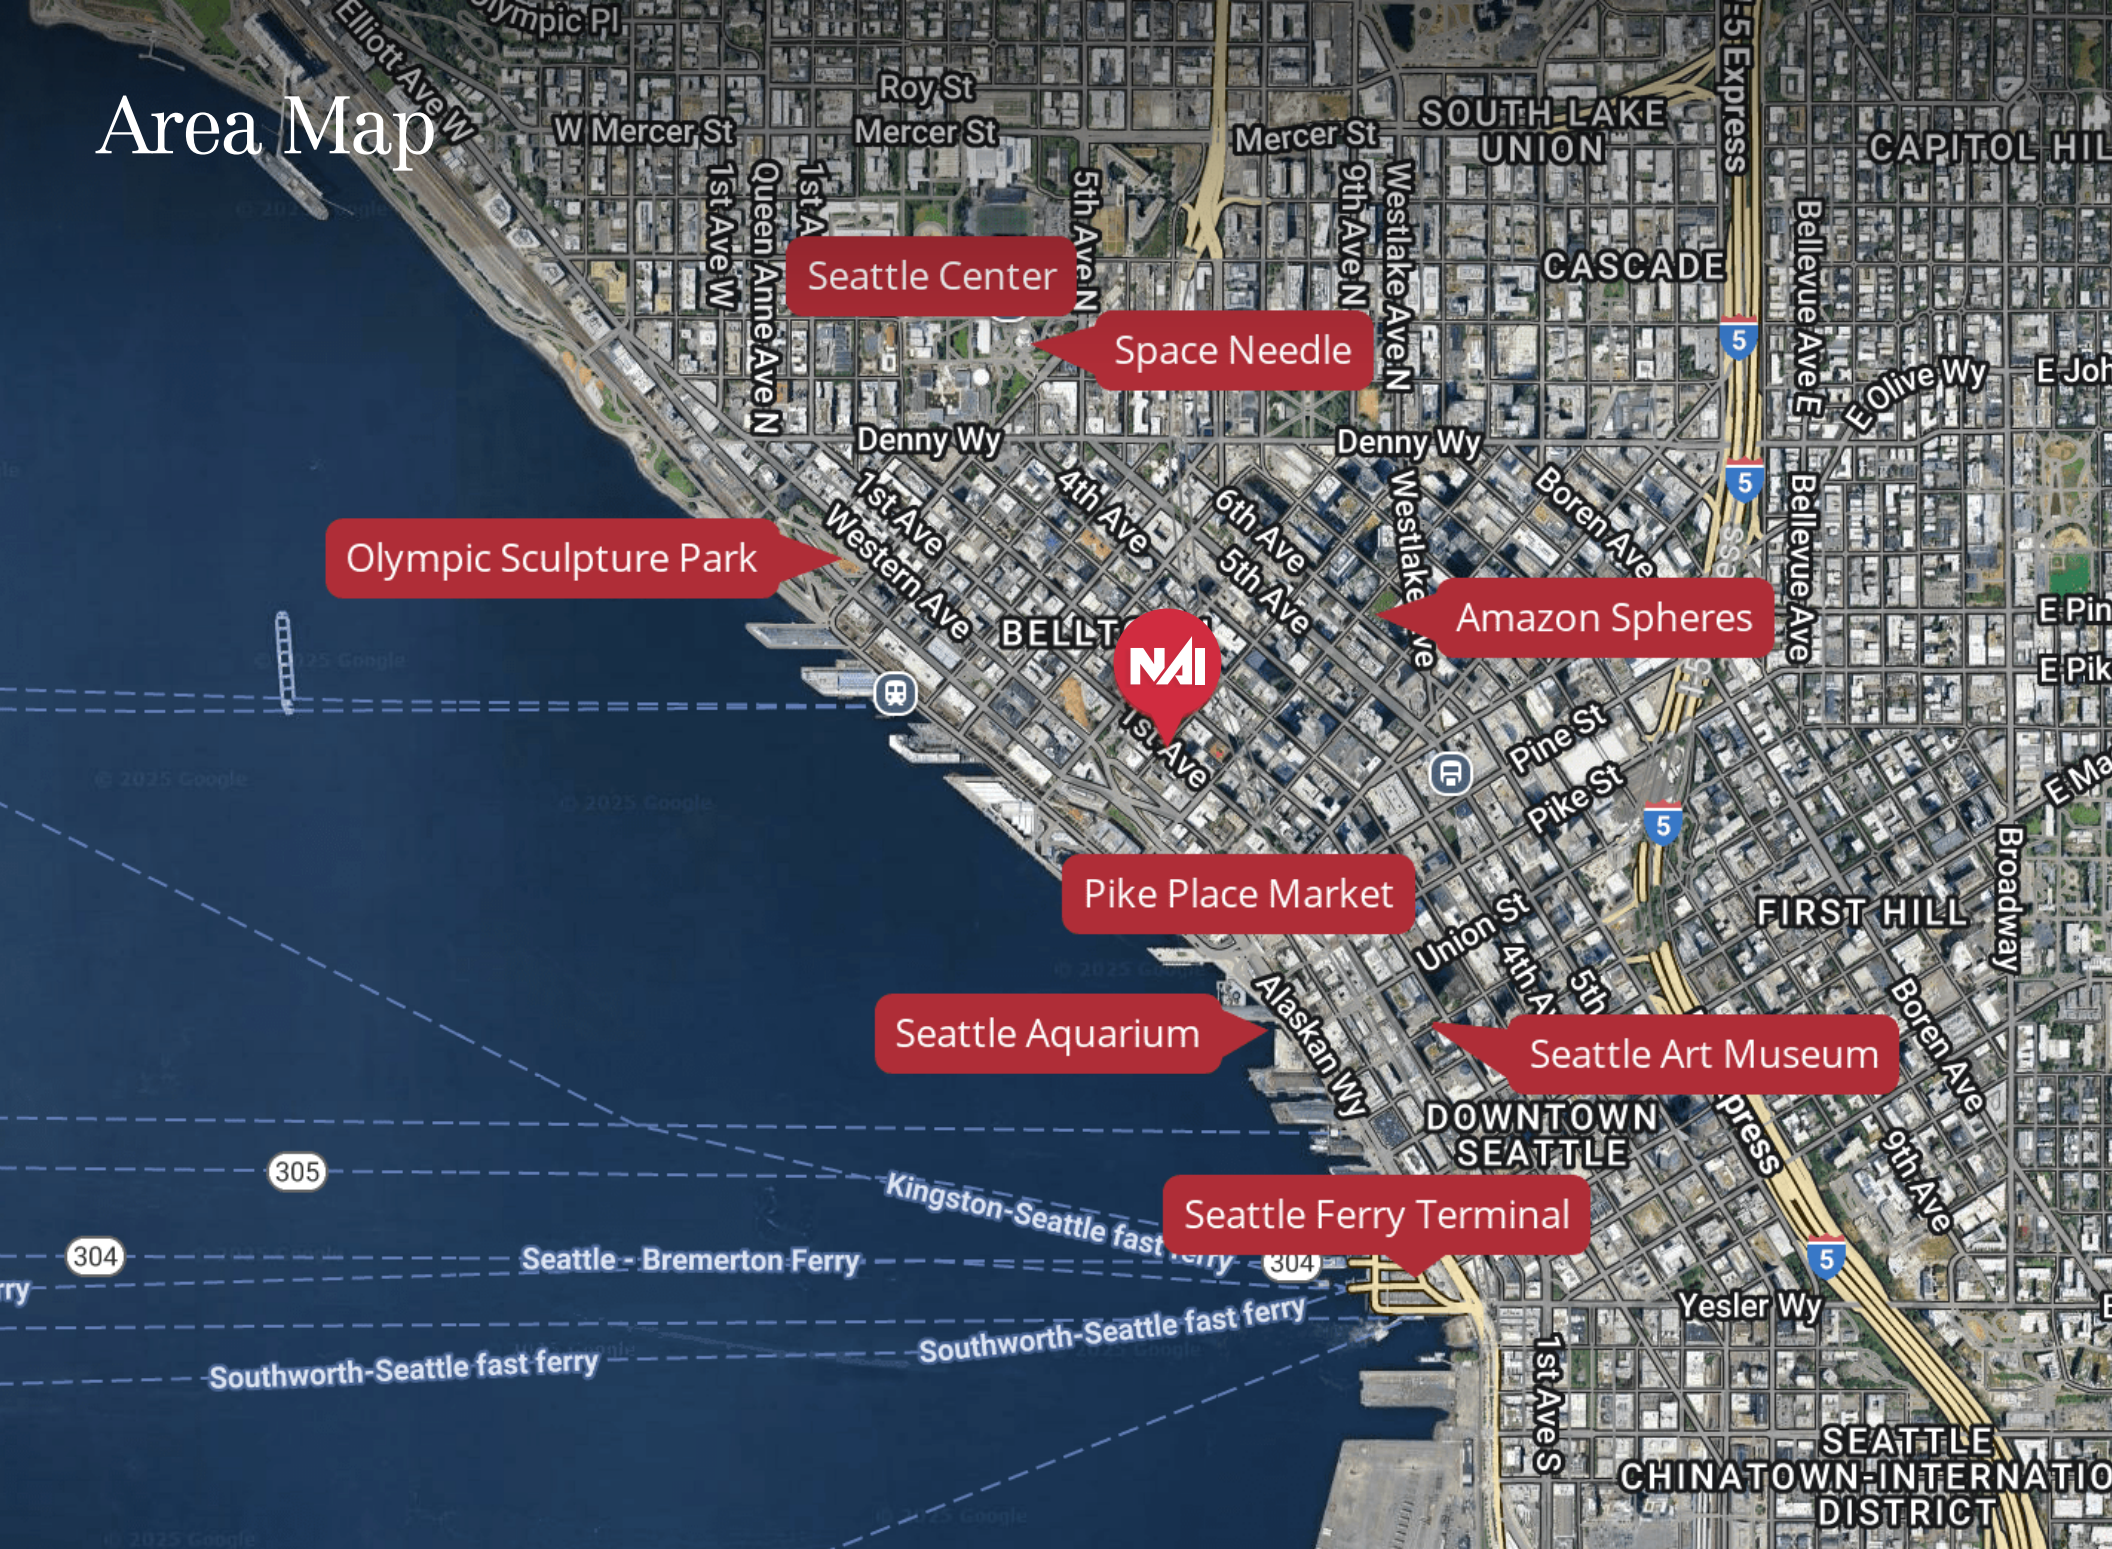

The project is expected to generate long-term economic, social, and environmental benefits by enhancing public access to waterfront, supporting tourism and local business, and providing a resilient infrastructure.
