DEMOGRAPHICS

FERNDALE, WA 98258

Located right off the I-5, Ferndale is only 6 miles from the county seat, Bellingham, and 13 miles from the Canadian border. As one of the fastest growing cities in the Northwest, Ferndale continues to foster a "family-first" culture. While Ferndale cherishes its strong agricultural roots as a timber and dairy producer, its occupational focus has shifted more towards manufacturing and construction.

The Nooksack River flows straight through the heart of town and is the center of this charming community. The main drag features many eateries and a combination of other local and national retailers. Ferndale's natural beauty can be experienced through the many historic parks in the area, including the most popular Hovander Homestead Park, which features a century-old classic Victorian home.

Additionally, Ferndale's location also provides easy access to a greater wealth of outdoor recreation, beyond just the surrounding area. Nestled between Mount Baker and the San Juan Islands, these scenic views are highly attractive to visitors. As a result, Whatcom County ranks fifth in the state for tourist spending.
