LOCATION OVERVIEW

CLARKSTON, WA

Clarkston, Washington is a stable and well-positioned regional market located in southeastern Washington, directly across the Snake River from Lewiston, Idaho, together forming the Lewis-Clark Valley.

The area serves as an important commercial, medical, and retail hub for a broad trade area extending across Asotin County, Nez Perce County, and surrounding rural communities.

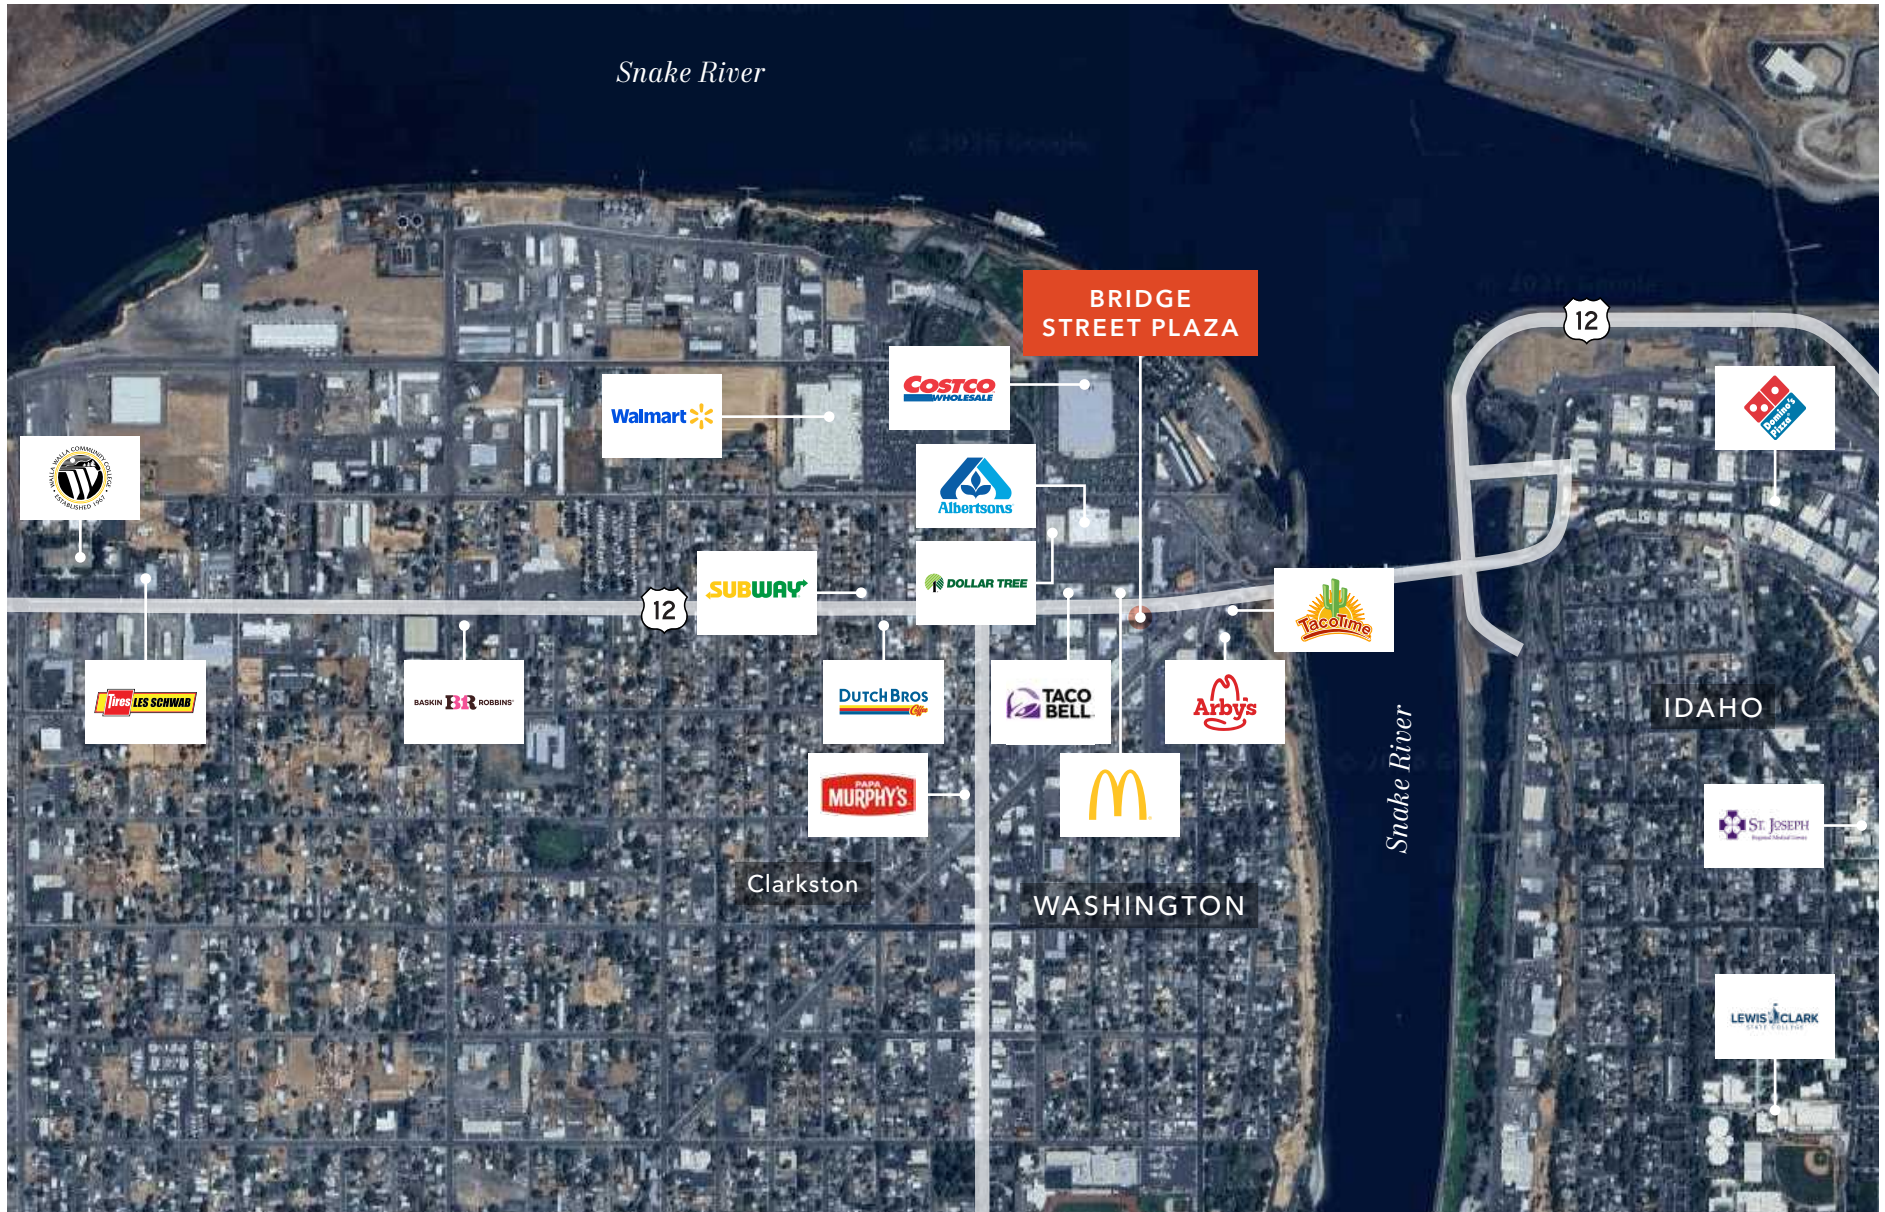

Clarkston benefits from its strategic location at the confluence of the Snake and Clearwater Rivers, providing access to barge transportation via the Port of Clarkston, one of the furthest inland seaports on the West Coast. The region is supported by a diversified economic base that includes healthcare, education, government services, agriculture, food processing, manufacturing, and transportation, contributing to long-term market stability.

The local retail corridor is anchored by national and regional tenants along Bridge Street, 5th Street, and 13th Street, with strong daily-needs demand driven by both Clarkston residents and cross-river traffic from Lewiston. Major employers in the immediate area include Tri-State Memorial Hospital, St. Joseph Regional Medical Center, Lewis-Clark State College, and the Port of Clarkston, providing a consistent employment base.
